'g' Green Design Center

GREEN BUILDING / GREEN LIVING

Green is becoming a concept that we all can embrace. Products, materials, accessories and household and personal care products are all catering to our need to become more environmentally conscience. We've become more sensitive about using our resources and the impact this has on how we build and live in our homes. A panel of local experts will present an introduction to ideas on green building for our homes whether you are considering new construction, modest updates or something in between. Moderator Nicole Goldman of 'g' Green Design Center in Mashpee Commons will lead the panel through a discussion about creating a weather-tight building, alternative energy choices, non-toxic materials and other ideas to get homeowners started on their path to being green.

2:30 - 3:30 P.M.

HOW TO PLAN A REMODEL

Considering a remodeling or design project? Before considering a remodeling or design project it is wise to understand what your project might entail. There are steps a homeowner can take to help ensure the project runs smoothly, enjoys a stress free experience, stays on budget with the outcome far exceeding expectations. There is a great benefit to incorporating and choosing the right team of professionals to collaborate with you. There is great value in the collaborative process; everyone involved in the project benefits. Not the least of which is the homeowner. In this workshop we will discuss collaboration with the architect, the builder, interior designer, and the home owner and setting realistic expectations.
